Here to serve

Your trusted government partner for defense and community success

Sourcewell is a self-funded government organization dedicated to serving those who serve. We partner with military installations, local governments, and public agencies to help them acquire the essential goods and services they need to operate effectively. Through Intergovernmental Support Agreements (IGSAs) and our extensive cooperative purchasing network, we provide solutions that save time, reduce costs, and enhance mission readiness.

Trusted by more than 50,000 public agencies nationwide, Sourcewell simplifies procurement, accelerates acquisition timelines, and maximizes resources — empowering military installations and communities to focus on what matters most.

Ready and resilient

From infrastructure demands to emergency response, installations and local governments must be equipped to adapt to evolving challenges. Our solutions ensure you are mission-ready and resilient in the face of evolving challenges.

Accelerating readiness

Military installations and local government agencies need efficient, reliable access to essential equipment, supplies, and services. We simplify purchasing and leverage economies of scale to reduce expenses through competitively awarded cooperative contracts.

Creating synergy

Strong partnerships between military installations and surrounding communities bolster national security and economic growth. We strengthen these ties by providing procurement solutions that create mutual benefits that allow efficient access to resources.

Maximizing resources

Limited budgets shouldn't limit impact. Achieving more with less takes strategic use of funding, personnel, and time. We help maximize resources through cooperative purchasing, delivering cost-effective solutions while maintaining compliance.

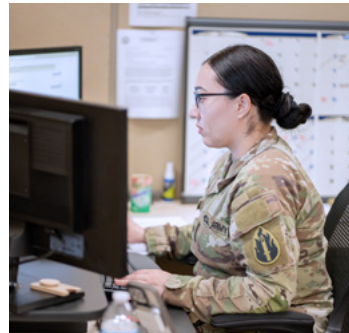

One mission, two powerful solutions

Intergovernmental Support Agreements (IGSAs)

IGSAs have long provided the U.S. military with a cost-effective approach to reducing administrative burdens and accelerating purchasing timelines.

Sourcewell has continuously expanded its support for military installations and commands, providing a reliable procurement pathway through IGSAs. What began with a single agreement has grown into a nationwide framework serving multiple branches of the U.S. military.

Our Installation Support Program (ISP) team includes professionals with military experience who understand the unique needs of military operations. Their expertise in navigating procurement complexities reduces acquisition timelines, and supports the efficient use of funding and assets, allowing installations to focus on mission-critical priorities.

Through these agreements, installations can procure a wide range of essential resources, including facility maintenance and repairs, job order construction, operational supplies (such as office supplies, maintenance tools, and personal protective equipment), and equipment including trailers, grounds maintenance machinery, and material handling equipment like forklifts.

Cooperative purchasing for public agencies

For more than 40 years, Sourcewell has been a trusted partner to government and education entities, simplifying procurement and expanding access to competitively awarded contracts. Our cooperative purchasing program meets bidding requirements, streaming access to essential products and services.

Whether for fleet vehicles, technology, public safety equipment, or infrastructure needs, agencies gain access to a vast network of suppliers, ensuring cost-effective solutions while maintaining compliance with procurement regulations.

By leveraging cooperative purchasing, public agencies can spend less time on complex procurement processes and more time delivering essential services to their communities.
